CHAMPAGNE

The wine of kings, Champagne is often synonymous with celebration and festivities, has always been the most charming wine of France. From the delightful bouquet, the refined carbonnation, to the unequivocal acidity. Always a good choice for apéritif and even better as a gastronomical compliment.

Traditional Bruts are the most approachable bubbly with a light effervescence, low residual sugars and refreshing acidity.

Blanc de Blancs (white of whites) are made solely from Chardonnay grapes and thus benefits greatly from ageing.

Rosé champagne can be made two different ways: either by blending red wine & white wine, or by extracting color and flavor through prolonged skin maceration. Both methods are effective and have consistently shown beautiful results.

LA PROVENCE

Welcome to Provence! The warm sun, the wonderful beaches, the beautiful people and the most refreshing wines, what more could you ask for? A short drive from Cannes and Marseille, this region produces crisp and fruity whites and dry, refreshing rosés. The reds are fruity with firm tannins. For a great white, try the Cassis, this tiny AOC is rested right above an old fishing village and will make you feel right at home.

L'ALSACE

The region of Alsace is incredibly unique, most notably inspired by German culture. The soil composition is also one of the most diverse and complex that you will find in France. Here you will find the renowned Riesling as well as the elusive lychee scented Gewurztraminer.

LA LOIRE

The Loire is the land of kings and the birthplace of France. This region is most well known for its goat cheese and wines. The soil is rich with limestone, chalk and in some places "silex". The result is a rich, mineral dry white wine. Think of Sancerre and its neighbor Menetou Salou, or even the greener and more mineral Pouilly Fumé, these are all exquisite examples of a delicate and refined grape. As for the reds, the Chinon and Saumur regions produce some of the finest cabernet franc wines. The Sancerre region works best with the more delicate pinot noir, and don't forget about "cot" the local name of malbec! After generations in the Loire, the cot has adapted to the local climate and soil and is usually used on its own for the Cot a.o.c. or blended with gamay to create a more densely structured wine.

LANGUEDOC-ROUSSILLON/SUD-OUEST

Languedoc is the southern most part of France, the country known for ripe fruits and friendly people you will ever meet. The wines from these regions have long been ignored, until more recently when wine lovers realized the potential of such a beautiful climate combined with intensely rich soils. Where to start? Cahors is Bordeaux's closest neighbor, working mostly with Malbec. The Côtes Catalanes is the embodiment of big fruity wines, made with as much heart as tannins.

LA VALLÉE DU RHÔNE

Have you ever wondered why bottles from Chateauneuf du Pape and its other southern-Rhône neighbors have such a distinct shape? The story goes back to the XIVth century when the papacy was relocated to Avignon thus becoming the "Pope's New Castle". This region makes wines ranging from a blend of 2 or 3 different grapes to the more traditional 13-grapes blend, which would explain why two neighbors can make such different wines. If you head north, you will venture into slightly cooler and more mountainous terrain

LE BEAUJOLAIS

The wine takes its name from the historical Province of Beaujolais, a wine producing region. It is located north of Lyon, and covers parts of the north of the Rhône département of the Rhône-Alpes region and southern areas of the Saône-et-Loire département of Burgundy. The region is known internationally for its long tradition of winemaking, for the use of carbonic maceration, and more recently for the popular Beaujolais nouveau.

La Voile

La Voile, or "The Sail," welcomes you to one of Boston's most authentic French restaurants. La Voile has all the casual elegance of a brasserie and the warm hospitality of a bistro.

The concept for our restaurant was inspired by a serendipitous turn of events when a sailor docked for the winter in the old port of Cannes.

The sailor happened to dock his sailboat across the street from La Voile au Vent (The Sail in the Wind) the meeting place of the Cannes' classic sail boat community.

Over time, and many glasses of wine, the Sailor befriended the owners of La Voile au Vent, and the plan to move the restaurant to Boston was hatched.

Et Voila, La Voile!!!

And should you wonder what the words on the walls of the bar and dining room mean, read on:

Bar: "Man of liberty, you will always cherish the sea. The sea is your reflection. You are looking at your soul."

~Charles Baudelaire,

Dining room: "When no one is looking at her, the sea is no longer the sea. She is what we are when no one sees us."

~Jules Supervielle

Capitainerie: "With each waft of twilight, upon the sea, upon the boats, I write your name"

~Paul Eluard

The difference

A bistrot, or bistro, is a small restaurant that serves simple, inexpensive meals.

The origin of the word is open to dispute: some say it goes back to the Russian occupation of Paris in 1815, when Cossack soldiers would shout "bystro" ("quickly" in Russian).

Others contend that it comes from an aperitif called "Bistrouille", a liquor coffee served in popular restaurants.

A brasserie is a more upscale, popular restaurant. It offers printed menus, tables clothes, professional service and is open everyday of the week.

Brasserie also means brewery in French and, in fact, many brasseries brew their own beer!
